SYMPATHY FOR ROJESTVENSKY.

While Rojestvensky's subordinate officers who have reached places of temporary safety, and members of the Russian admiralty at home, are daily finding new points of attack on the unfortunate Russian commander, it is interesting to note the treatment he is receiving from his captors. Togo, the conqueror, visited Rojestvensky in the Tokio hospital and, according to a dispatch, "expressed his sympathy for the admiral's wounds, praised the desperately courageous fight of the Russians and expressed the hope that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky would soon be able to return to Russia." Admiral Yamamoto, the Japanese minister of the navy, sent flowers to Rojestvensky accompanied by the following note: "I beg to express my respect for you in discharging your duty as a soldier in fighting desperately for the sake of your fatherland. I cannot refrain from sympathizing with you in your wounded condition and hope the accommodations of your hospitals and the ability of our naval surgeons will cease your sufferings and speedily restore your health."

The dispatches fail to show that the Russian emperor or any member of the Russian admiralty has made an effort to convey to the wounded admiral an expression of sympathy or a word of appreciation. They sent him out on what proved to be a hopeless mission with a hastily improvised and poorly equipped fleet. "The Emperor commanded us on leaving the Baltic to fight and defeat our enemy, and we were anxious to obey his orders," says one of the captured Russian officers. That Rojestvensky did his utmost to obey orders cannot be questioned. He sailed for waters where he had every reason to expect the enemy to be. There is nothing to indicate that lack of courage or disloyalty on the part of Rojestvensky contributed to the defeat. Lack of ability may have been there, but his captors are sufficiently magnanimous to overlook it. They, more generous than his own people compliment his conduct and perhaps, the wounded admiral will find in the sympathy and appreciation expressed by the Japanese, solace for the harsh treatment of his own government.

Lord Curzon is sending messages to the tribes on India in a novel way. He learned a speech in all the dialects and then spoke it into phonographs. These talking machines will be sent broad cast over India and all the people will so be enabled to hear the voice of the viceroy speaking in their native tongue.

OPEN-TOP OBSERVATION CARS.

Novelty in railway passenger equipment will shortly be introduced by the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company. That Company are now building a number of open-top observation cars to be attached during the summer months to its daylight trains running through the Royal Gorge, Grand Canon of the Arkansas, Canon of the Grand River, and the Black Canon of the Gunnison. These cars are modern construction and have a seating capacity for twenty-two persons; sides but no tops, being entirely open, thus giving passengers from California to the east a free and unobstructed view of the grand scenery of the Rocky Mountains.

These cars will be entirely at the service—free of charge—of all occupants of through sleepers of all classes. This is but one of the many comforts and advantages offered by this, The Scenic Line of the World. Ask W. J. Shotwell, General Agent, 625 Market Street, for handsomely illustrated traveler's guide; sent free of charge.
